This course will meet 9/2/14-10/24/14

Instructor: J. Ciorciari

This course examines key legal and political issues facing the United Nations and other international policy actors as they endeavor to “build peace” in areas emerging from conflict. The transition from war to peace is a complex, challenging process. Even after warring parties enter into peace agreements, further steps are required to make those agreements durable. International actors are almost always involved to some extent, and not only to advance the welfare of the local population. Failed or war-torn areas also tend to export many of the most pressing threats to international security. It has never been more important for policymakers to understand the potential and the pitfalls of various approaches to peacebuilding.
